Oral Health Tips

Custom-fitted mouthguards offer superior protection, retention and comfort, and do not interfere with breathing and talking.

Prevent this by wearing a Playsafe mouthguard

When teeth are knocked out in sports injuries it can lead to many trips to dental specialists and thousands of dollars in tooth replacement or repair.

You can reduce your chance of concussions or tooth injuries by wearing a sports mouthguard. There are two types of mouthguards available, store-bought or custom made. "Store-bought" mouthguards offer some protection but do not fit or hold up as well as a custom-made type. Store-bought types are bulky and require the athlete to apply constant pressure to hold them in place.

Playsafe mouthguards are heat & pressure formed over models of your mouth and specially tailored to fit you comfortably, enhancing your level of play. Playsafe mouthguards provide the highest level of protection for your teeth.

Ask your dentist to make a Playsafe mouthguard for the athlete in your family.

Playsafe mouthguards are available in multiple colors and various levels of protection to accommodate different team sports.
